Baharat – Mama's Arabian Spice Mix

In the Levant every good kitchen has its own mix of Baharat that is used every day to flavour meals. Baharat is the Arab equivalent of Garam Massala, the Indian spice mix, and this particular flavourful spice blend mix is very close to what my Mama use to make which is why we named it after her.

And this is what Judges said:

- An interesting blend of spices with a wonderful fruity and warming aroma.
- Visually attractive, this spice mix has large pieces in it and looks home-made. It delivers on spice and heat and gives a punch. It would work on the barbecue and to pep up a multitude of different dishes.

Sumac Citrus Berries with Dead Sea Salt from the Jordan Valley

A brand-new product that infuses the Sumac in its natural form berry form with a truly amazing salt from the Jordanian Dead Sea Valley. It adds a zesty touch that heightens the flavours of any dish. Ideal for everyday use from seasoning, pickling, marinating to preserving.

And this is what Judges said:

These crystals have an aromatic aroma with a strong smell of cherry. It has a tempting array of flavours ranging from sweetness to spiciness, although it is not oversweet. An innovative approach creating a seasoning salt which so many applications. A versatile product which would work well as a marinade and seasoning to spice up other dishes.
